Chapter 1 by Trevauhn Jenkins

Once upon a time there was a queen. She was the queen over all the land, and because she was queen. She only slept on the finest of mattresses. One day she woke up, and realized that her mattress was not the finest of them all. She traveled everywhere to find the perfect mattress. She went to a bakery and asked. The baker man politely replied "I certainly do not have a mattress worthy to present you my queen". While she was at the bakery she asked the gingerbread man. He said the same thing. After she searched the whole kingdom. She went to America. While there she went to every place you can imagine. She even went to a baseball game, while there she decided to try a hot dog. Sadly though she had no luck finding the perfect mattress. As she left, she tripped on a lawn mower, and was knocked out. The ambulance came and took her to the hospital. While there they used electricity to bring her back to life. They monitored her on a computer. When she woke up she realized the best bed of them all was the hospital bed. She thanked the lawnmower as she left, and she lived happily ever after.
